

Abstract of the Disclosure

The present invention provides an optical transmission module configured such that a driver IC chip to drive a semiconductor laser device, a first insulation plate having the semiconductor laser device mounted thereon and a coupling optical component are mounted in this order, a thin film inductor element and thin film resistor element which are connected in parallel are formed on a second insulation plate and a bias current is supplied to the semiconductor laser device via this LR element.